FOREWORD

Perusing Ubiquity by Pawar Pramod has indeed given me another impression about India. The India Africans or precisely Cameroonians are exposed to, is a country that has made significant progress in Information Technology, Ophthalmology, Electrical Engineering, and above all, their booming film industry. Pawar Pramod's meticulously-crafted-lines in Ubiquity have again come to notify me that, Indians are equally making giant strides in the direction of Poetry.

Written in five parts, Pawar philosophizes on varied themes that portray the ubiquitous quality of nature. Some of these themes include: time, truth, birth, death, beauty, words, light, darkness, science, work and religion. The form of his poetry is unique, but it in no way blurs the profundity and relevance of the concerns he raises in his work. Instead, it reflects the abundance or varieties that colour nature.

In a rare but appealing style, Pawar successfully documents his thoughts about the realities and controversies surrounding human existence especially man's littleness and helplessness in the phase of "cruel" but powerful forces of nature. Like the 20th century American novelist, Theodore Dreiser, who championed naturalism in the American literary imagination, Pawar Pramod's Ubiquity equally poses pertinent questions about the uncertainty of human life and the precarious living conditions of man. Determinism is a recurrent spirit that animates the reader's consciousness as he/she goes through the lines of this work.

Another striking element in Pawar's poetry is his transcendentalist ideology. In philosophizing about the self in Part III, he stresses on the uniqueness of every individual, the empowerment of the individual and the need for hard work like what Ralph Waldo Emerson emphasizes on in his essay entitled Self Reliance. Like Emerson, Pawar sees nature as the source of all inspiration. Pawar's interest and worry about nature propel him to incessantly question, if not express doubts about the destiny of the individual especially in a world in which controversies abound. The following expressions drawn from Obiquity further portray Pawar's thoughts about the controversies surrounding human life:

Success is failure
Failure is success...

*Light is darkness
Darkness is light....
One is a beginning
One is an ending...*

*Present is past
Past is future.....*

Perhaps, the most glaring glimmer of hope that is evoked is this beautifully crafted poem resides in religion. His references to God in expressions like “forgiveness is divine... All walk along a way to God... All pray for me...” can be interpreted as what can lead man to his salvation. The expression, “Redemption is the final door” as reiterated by the poet, appears to be the ultimate hope or the safest escapist channel that one can use to flee from the throes that plague human life.

Obiquity by Dr Pawar Pramod Ambadasrao is indeed a fascinating piece of poetry. Every lover of Poetry and Philosophy should have it in his or her library.

You just forgive evil-doers
Mind makes all that evil
All evil is good
All good is evil...
Forgive who made me suffer
Forget what had happened

Forgiveness is divine
Forgetting is sublime...
Keep your senses pure
You will sense me all around you
I am in you
I am in you...

Learn what you do not know

Teach what you have learnt

All is pre-planned

All is pre-planned...

Science with belief unravels

The truth and it's me

All is not proven

All is not proven...

I am an atom

I love thy Nature

So she loves me forever

All is from her...

Food you have is mind

To behave, act and purify the self

Not all is the intellect

Someone mistakes the self...

In a chain of life

I got stuck in a flux of time

I am directionless

I am directionless...

A sufferer of body is imprisoned

A sufferer of mind has set free

Hope still lingers within

Hope still lingers within ...

Redemption is a final door

To escape me and you

All dreams come true

All dreams come true...

Thinkers think what they can

They say not what they can

Do we trust what they say?

Do we trust what they say?

V

Keep an intellect aside

And seep into the self

Keep an eye on 'I'

Keep an eye on 'I'...

Every moment hints at me

It hints at the future of time

Keep an eye on I

Keep an eye on I...

Every moment means a lot

That springs from Deep Ocean

The sky is full of particles

Where infinity is the horizon...

I'm present in all religions

Presence is absence

Search for me within

And you will find me without...

All pray for me

All pray for me

You must a silent actor
You must a silent actor...
Humanity is a religion
All said much more
Awaken the self
Kindle the self...
All walk along a way to God

On foot, you may tread stony path
Wake up, the bell rings now
Wake up, the bell rings now ...
Pack up now all those with you
Time is near; time is fleeting
Beware of the Time
Beware of the Time...
Can the world know who I am?
Intellect has enmity upon you
Just overcome intellect
And seep into me?
I'm the religion

I'm the science

I'm the mystery

I'm the universe...

Every sentence de-centers

Defining is a meaning

All meanings are one

I'm the Absolute...

A meaning is for meanings

All meanings have a centre

I'm the Absolute

I'm the Absolute...

If you ask me what I have written

I may not mean what I mean now

Now I mean what I write

I mean not as I write not...

Why the meaning escapes

When I write

And when I read

I never read what I write...

The structure holds the meaning

Do meanings have their structures?

If they have structures,

Then why they mean what is not meant...

Languages make me interpret

What I mean

Do words mean

What I mean?

Here comes difference

All is human utterance

I play with words,

Words play with words...

I look for perfection

That resides within me

To meet Him

The Absolute, the power...

End is a thought

Beginning is an inquiry

Need to know who I am
Need to know who I am...
No life is absurd

Absurd is thought
No time is cruel
All is the wrath of time...
Two people are at quarrel
One thinks God is Another says no God
Months, years passed...

The former convinces people how he is right

The latter does as the former
All wisdom explode with A change in perceptions...
The former who says God is Now says no God

And the latter says God is not Now says God is...

Words never mean what you mean
They merely mean what you mean not

Go beyond words

Word is the Time...

No existence for yes

Yes is nowhere

Yes is the presence of no

No is the absence of yes...

Light is the absence of darkness

Darkness is the presence of light

Light is darkness

And darkness light...

Absence is presence

Presence absence

Know thy presence

Absence is presence...

There will be a time when

All interpretations cease

At a still point

The Absolute...

Feel my presence

In you always

Nothing is all

Nothing is all...

You are the power

Always feel it so

All is possible

All is possible...

All is everything

Everything is me

All is nothing for those

Who need to sink into sea...

Absurdity controls mind

As mind senses body

Your words are futile

Sense is me...

No structure binds me

No pattern frames me
I mean what I mean
I mean what I mean...
Perhaps I'm alive
Or dead, an entity resting
Behind the bushes or breeze blowing
All around you !
